

Garden Sass

(By A. M.)

W. H. Adsit and wife, nee Lou Parsley, have bought a farm near Wichita and are now living on it. The father, H. Adsit, and daughter, Leona, are living on the old home place, in section 30, Fairview Township known as the old Baker place. This farm is leased by the Empire, and now has one oil well, and another location made lately. On the W. H. Adsit farm there are 14 wells on the pump, averaging about 125 barrels per day. Fred Dickman, a relative, living on adjoining land, also has some oil money coming in. These families came here nine years ago, and bought the land which was very poor for farming but mighty good for oil.

H. Adsit, the father, had many times told his family there was oil under that soil. As he came from an oil country in Pennsylvania much respect had to be paid to his words and they proved true. The Baker family homesteaded the place, and suffered the early day privations and then sold too soon. A coincidence is, that the grandmother of the present generation, did just the same thing. She owned a farm in Kentucky, and sold it, and shortly oil was found in large quantities on the place. Several of the family are still living about here. The story of the Adsit-Dickman family is a fair example of what oil has done for hundreds of families around here.
